

*“On any given day, 3,052 people join the church. Every hour, 127 people are baptized.”

The Adventist Church is growing. Worldwide, there are nearly 18 million members who are studying God’s Word, sharing His message, and praising His name.

But there’s a problem. We don’t have enough churches to house them.

In the last ten years, Maranatha has received more than 100,000 requests for churches. These are requests for existing Seventh-day Adventist congregations who have no place to worship.

What we need is a way to provide strong, simple structures that can be built anywhere—from an urban neighborhood in Peru to a remote village in Malawi.

The One-Day Church is a response to this urgent need.

The One-Day CHURCH

ABOUT THE ONE-DAY CHURCH

The One-Day Church program strives to meet the worldwide need for church buildings with a high quality, low-cost, easy-to-build structure called the One-Day Church (ODC).

The ODC kit provides the roofing and framework, two components that are the most difficult and expensive to attain for most areas where we work. The local congregation finishes the walls and floors with local materials according to their custom.

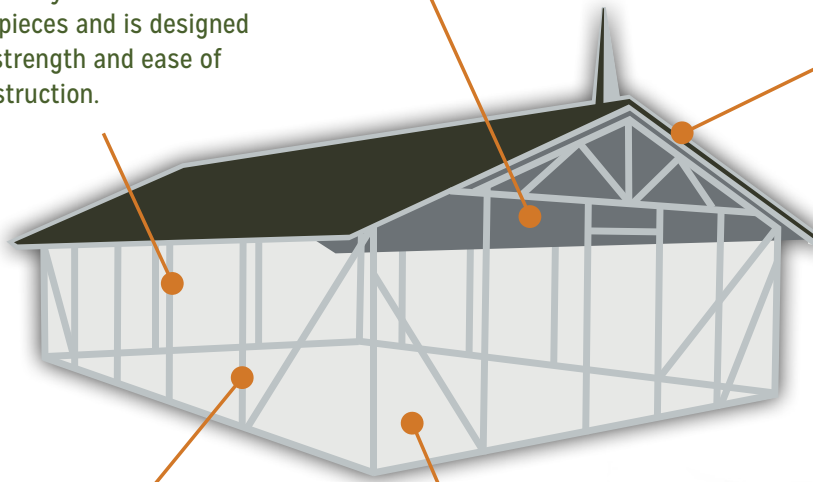

In some countries, Maranatha provides the ODC kit and completes the walls. The degree of aid that Maranatha provides varies from country to country.

The Components of a Church

The church is 38 feet long and 20 feet wide, accommodating at least 125 people.

A One-Day Church kit has 224 pieces and is designed for strength and ease of construction.

While most congregations are able to build walls for a church, what they lack is proper materials to make a permanent, water-tight roof. The galvanized steel roof is a key to the quality and longevity of the church.

Each One-Day Church kit weighs 1,295 lbs.

Flooring depends largely on location and availability of materials, in addition to congregation preference.
